One of my deepest wishes for you is that your studies will become an expression of worship so that you will see God's hand at work in your academic life.

There are lots of ways this can happen. One is so simple that it is often overlooked: you frequently have the ability to choose your research topics in a way that will allow you to consult edifying books. Since you have to do research anyway, why not take the opportunity to find out what fellow believers who have attained expertise in your area of inquiry have to say?

This is a list of books that might be helpful to you as you seek to think about all of life in light of your faith. All books are in the Van Pelt stacks unless otherwise indicated. They are presented in three categories: books that might help you on papers, books that you might find personally beneficial, and books that will help you understand the Bible better.

Aaagh – Too Many Books!

If this list is overwhelming, start with these:

Is the faith true? Check out N. T. Wright, Richard Bauckham, Larry Hurtado and Alvin Plantinga.

Humanities or Liberal Arts questions? Check out Taylor, Wolterstorff and Stark.

Science/Faith? Check out Numbers, Harrison, Morris, McGrath, Schloss, and Polkinghorne.

Homosexuality? Check out Robert Gagnon

Books That Might Help You On Papers

These books will stimulate you to integrate your studies with your faith, particularly your studies in humanities and other fuzzy classes. Most of these are academic works written by Christians (although not all are evangelicals). You will not (and should not) agree with everything within them simply because you share the authors' faith.

Barr, Stephen. A professor of particle physics at the University of Delaware.
Modern Physics and Ancient Faith - BL265 .P4 B37 2003

Soul Searching: The Religious and Spiritual Lives of American Teenagers - BL625.47 .S63 2005

Sommerville, C. John. A historian at the University of Florida.

The Decline of the Secular University - LC383 .S66 2006

Religion In The National Agenda: What We Mean By Religious, Spiritual, Secular - BL51 .S62188 2009

Stark, Rodney. These books follow a pattern – examine the contemporary consensus of historians and then reexamine the evidence using sociological models to see if it holds up. Frequently it does not and Stark is often able to demonstrate convincingly that the academy has major blind spots when it comes to the Church throughout history. His scholarship is uneven, but at his best he is simply brilliant. He got his Ph.D. at Berkeley, and so was hardly socialized to be sympathetic to the church. Stark was not a believer when he began his research on the history of Christianity and is only now a believer in a very loose sense. Read these if you're being bombarded with the message that the Church has been an instrument of oppression and violence throughout history.

The Rise of Christianity: A Sociologist Reconsiders History - BR166 .S75 1997

One True God: The Historical Consequences of Monotheism - BL221 .S75 2001

God's Battalions: The Case For the Crusades - D157 .S736 2009

Swinburne, Richard. An emeritus professor of philosophy at Oxford, he has written many influential works.

The Coherence of Theism. BT130 .S94 1993

Providence and the Problem of Evil. BT135 .S95 1998

The Resurrection of God Incarnate. BT480 .S95 2003

The Existence of God. BT103 .S95 2004

Faith and Reason. BT50 .S96

Is There A God? BT102 .S96 2010

Was Jesus God? BT220 .S95 2008

Taylor, Charles. These are some of the most important works of contemporary philosophy and they are written by a thoroughly convinced Christian.

Sources of the Self: The Making of the Modern Identity - BD450 .T266 1989

Vitz, Paul. Professor of psychology at New York University.

Psychology As Religion: The Cult of Self-Worship. BF51.V58 1994

Wolterstorff, Nicholas. A professor at Yale, Wolterstorff has written extensively on his faith and how it intersects with art, political philosophy, education, and whatever else interests him at the moment. He's one of those people who seem to be good at everything.

Divine Discourse – Philosophical Reflections On The Claim God Speaks - BT180.W67 W65 1995

Justice: Rights and Wrongs - BR115 .J8 W65 2008

Works and Worlds of Art - BH39 .W65

Wright, N. T. This work (together called Christian Origins and the Question of God and part of an anticipated six-volume series) is a magisterial interpretation of the gospels as well as a robust defense of the historical resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. His doctorate is from Oxford and he until his retirement served as a bishop in the Anglican Church.
The Resurrection of the Son of God - BS2398 .W75 1992 V.3

Books You May Find Personally Helpful

These books tend to be non-academic books written by Christians with academic credentials. I suppose they might prove helpful on papers, but they are more likely to be personally enriching.

Bonhoeffer, Dietrich. His book on community makes me cry. It's a magnificent study of the nature of true Christian community. Also, Bonhoeffer was a German pastor who was involved in a nearly-successful plot to assassinate Adolph Hitler. Really.
Life Together - BV4503 .B622

Chesterton, G.K. One of the great Christian thinkers of the previous generation. Exerted a huge influence on Lewis.
Orthodoxy - BR121 .C5 1924

Hart, David Bentley. Hart has taught at Duke and at the University of Virginia. His essays are a delight to read.
The Beauty of the Infinite: The Aesthetics of Christian Truth - BT55 .H37 2003
Atheist Delusions: The Christian Revolution and Its Fashionable Enemies - BR162.3 .H37 2009

Jacobs, Alan. He's a professor at Wheaton. You have probably never heard of this guy. Read him anyway.
A Theology of Reading: The Hermeneutics of Love - PN98 .R44 J33 2001

Lewis, C. S. Read him.
Mere Christianity - BT77 .L348 1987
The Screwtape Letters - BR125 .L67 2001
Miracles - BT97 .L43 1947
Reflections on the Psalms - BS1433 .L4 1958
The Weight of Glory - BR123 .L48
The Great Divorce - T239 L585
The Abolition of Man - LB41 .L665 1947

Books That Will Help You Understand The Bible

Van Pelt Library has an adequate collection of commentaries. A commentary is a scholarly work that thoroughly explains one book of the Bible. Gordon Wenham's excellent commentary on Genesis is at BS491.2 .W67 Vol 1 and Vol 2 and Robert Mounce's commentary on Revelation is at BS2825.3.M69 1998. Other commentaries will be mostly between those two call numbers.

Commentaries vary greatly in quality. When you browse the web, you should go to bestcommentaries.com while you select your volumes. If not, you should consult the New Testament Commentary Survey by D. A. Carson (BS2341.2 .C33 2001).
